Bringing the thunder to women's aviation event

Captain Vicki Connors, 405 (Long Rang Patrol)
Squadron

On a beautiful morning in Greenwood, a mostly-female crew from 404 Squadron, made up of a group of aircrew and technicians from across 14 Wing, took to the skies in search of other female aviators making their way to Thunder Bay, Ontario. These women were participating in the Canadian Ninety-Nines Gold Cup Air Rally.

This competition is set in Visual Flight Rules (VFR) conditions and comprises aviation-related questions, ground photos, calculation of fuel consumption, spot landings and more.

The Ninety-Nines is the largest international organization of women aviators, composed of professional pilots for airlines, industry and government. It is also the organization which put

404 (Long Range Patrol and Training) Squadron's own Captain Mary Cameron-Kelly on a stamp in 2018. Of course, as the only two female pilots currently flying the CP140 Aurora, Cameron-Kelly and Captain Vicki Connors wanted to support these ladies in their competition, in conjunction with some pilot training opportunities for Connors. Being away from 14 Wing also gave technicians the opportunity to work with a flight engineer and experience the differences in both putting the plane to bed and prepping it for flight the following day.

The aircraft and crew made it in to Thunder Bay without issue. It's worth noting the Aurora crew itself was not participating in the rally. However, quite a few of the competitors didn't arrive, due to weather conditions not meeting VFR requirements. Upon landing, the crew was met by members of the Sleeping Giant Chapter

VPI memorial service October 6

VP International hosts its annual memorial service Sunday, October 6, at the 14 Wing Greenwood memorial, just inside the main gates to the base.

VP International is a worldwide aircrew association with a membership of over 6,000 regular and retired aircrew in 23 countries, headquartered at 14 Wing. The association promotes aircrew interest in its goals of professionalism and fellowship in maritime patrol aviation.

The annual service is an opportunity to dedicate new names to the VPI memorial book and honour past 1,900 entries, representing aircrew from 13 countries who have died in the service of their countries since 1947.

Attendees are invited to the VPI centre from noon, and should be seated at the memorial by 12:50 p.m. for the 1 p.m. service. A reception will follow the service at the VPI centre. ➔

Water disruptions October 4, 5

October 4 and 5, there are two separate water outages affecting areas of 14 Wing Greenwood, including the Residential Housing Units' neighbourhood, in support of a water valve replacement project.

October 4, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., buildings within the RHUs affected will include 21, 22, 24, 72 and 74 Lodge Road; 2 Ivy Street, 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 18 and 20 Kingswood Place; and two fire hydrants, #337 and #341.

October 5, between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., buildings B202, Hangar 2 and Hangar 4, within the Mission Support Area, will also be without water. ➔ of the Canadian Ninety-Nines. Hosts had the opportunity to take a tour of the Aurora, followed by a small meet and greet at the hangar of the local Northwestern Ontario Air Search and Rescue Association (NOASARA).

After a night tour of historic downtown Thunder Bay and a good rest, the next morning was a once-in-a-lifetime experience for those female aviators able to make the journey through the muck. The lucky ladies got to fly in the CP140 for a familiarization flight. While flying over the competitors stuck at a nearby airport, we discussed the differences of flying military versus general aviation aircraft. The Aurora crew loves to “show off” and explain their jobs to other aviators, so interested individuals from the Confederation College and NOASARA were encouraged to ask questions.

It was certainly an honour to meet and interact with women who have paved the way for others' careers in aviation. Even though the weekend's event didn't go as planned for the fleet of women, organizers and participants made it work and kept their spirits high. Seeing them interact with and look to Cameron-Kelly with such pride and respect is truly inspiring.

The trip may have its elements of “stardom” and fun, but it also enabled the pilots to experience high-density airspace, as the they conducted training approaches in Ottawa, Toronto, Montreal and more. This type of exposure keeps pilots agile, as the radio is busier due to the higher volume of traffic and everything seems to happen at once. This sort of flying builds competence and confidence, making all better aviators. ➔

“Good! Super! Very nice!” were the comments from Major General Alain Pelletier, commander, 1 Canadian Air Division; as he took in one briefing packed into a two-day schedule visiting 14 Wing Greenwood September 18 and 19. The highlight of this stop? Seeing the base from the top floor of the newly-constructed air traffic control tower.

Pelletier, with 1 CAD Chief Warrant Officer J-C Parent, based themselves in Greenwood for a few reasons: taking in a CP140 flight with the biennial Exercise Cutlass Fury, taking place off the east coast September 9 to 20; watching a 404 (Long Range Patrol and Training) Squadron crew perform in a segment of an international, simulated exercise, Coalition Virtual Flag; and meeting the people and seeing the work that takes place in Greenwood day-to-day.

“He ended up seeing almost everywhere on the base, and he was interested to see some other aspects – the military family resource centre, and 14 Mission Support Squadron's many spaces,” said 14 Wing Commander Colonel Brendan Cook September 20. “He left with a good appreciation of 14 Wing.”

Cook said Pelletier was appreciative of the work and commitment 14 Wing personnel display, at home and around the world; he also knows there will likely be some requirements of the wing to come out of Pelletier's fall gathering of wing command teams.

“He is in the midst of evaluating the wings, so I do have a few minor things we can work on just from this visit and, later this fall, we'll see where the air force needs us to go.”

Pelletier was greeted first thing September 18 with an honour guard at wing headquarters to start the day.

“Thanks very much for all of you being here this morning, and I'm looking forward to meeting some of you over the next couple of days. Please, chat with the Chief and I and show us what you do.”

He then toured support, maintenance, personnel and flying units across the wing over the next two days. The Cutlass Fury flight was his first CP140 Aurora flight, and Cook said Pelletier was impressed watching the 407 Squadron crew “chasing a very difficult submarine contact.” The

Virtual Flag simulation combined hundreds of stations working from Australia, the United Kingdom, the United States and Canada to deal with “multiple threats, and various targets,” Cook said. “We hit all the targets, which demonstrates we're fully connected with the world – and this is the future of training.”

That evening, he dropped in on the Royal Canadian Air Cadets 517 Flight/ Lieutenant Graham Squadron and also visited the Greenwood Military Family Resource Centre, in unscheduled stops.

The air traffic control tower visit was a bird's eye opportunity to look at the wing's physical infrastructure, highlighting recently completed improvements, outlining what's underway and forecasting what the next five to 10 years should include. ➔

Next big thing: distributed mission training

Bill Brown,
Senior OMS officer, 404 (Long Range Patrol and Training) Squadron

Concurrent with the more well-known Exercise CUT-LASS FURY September 9 to 20, Coalition VIRTUAL FLAG (CVF) 19-4 included 14 Wing Greenwood participation with its Aurora Procedure Crew Trainer (PCT) mission simulator, located in 404 (Long Range Patrol and Training) Squadron's Thorney Island Simulation Centre.

The CP140 fleet was tasked by the commander of the Royal Canadian Air Force (RCAF) to participate in the United States Air Force-led exercise, primarily using distributed mission training (DMT) architecture. During the training, the PCT was connected to dozens of combat mission and flight simulators across Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom and the U.S.

Planning for the complex, joint warfare simulation started almost a year ago, with 404 Squadron's modeling and simulation (M&S) experts working closely with the Royal Canadian Navy's (RCN) Distributed Mission

Members of 14 Wing Greenwood CP140 Aurora crews participate in their portion of the international Coalition VIRTUAL FLAG 19-4 training exercise, from the Thorney Island Simulator Training Area, 14 Wing Greenwood, September 13.

Corporal K. Neate

Operations Centre (DMOC), the RCAF Air Warfare Centre M&S coordination team and M&S planners at the U.S. Air Force DMOC at USAF Base Kirtland, New Mexico. 14

Wing Greenwood's contributions included two crews, from 404 Squadron and 405 (Long Range Patrol) Squadron, to complete the five air tasking order missions.

Crew planning took place over several days and included preparing for authentic anti-surface and anti-submarine warfare tasks. The Aurora crews faced a multi-threat, open conflict simulation scenario and worked alongside their allies from the USAF, the United States Navy, the Royal Australian Air Force and the Royal Air Force. This is currently the highest level of training achievable via simulation.

As with real-life training, the crew must fight together - or fail together. Miscommunication can have deadly results, with friendly units engaged by opposing force weapons systems. The Aurora is a very capable surveillance and reconnaissance aircraft and, using its advanced sensors, can share abundant tactical information with supported fighting forces.

Adding to the opportunity of exercising in a coalition DMT environment, crews conducted tactics development and confirmation for two Tactical Electronic Warfare Instructor Course mentors. With the centre of excellence residing in the 404 Squadron Simulation Flight, the CP140 fleet will continue to advance its simulation training capabilities.

Once tasked, the fleet will commence planning to participate in CVF 20-4. Small-scale monthly DMT exercises are planned with the RCN DMOC and ships combat teams over the next months. As always, 14 Wing Greenwood and 404 Squadron remain "Ready to Fight." ➔

Tips to make fall gatherings a breeze

(NC) With a quick shift in weather and jam-packed schedules, autumn can go by in the blink of an eye. Here are some tips to get ahead to make sure you enjoy every moment with friends and family:

Prep freezer meals. Cooler temperatures call for warm, comforting meals, which are easy to get ready. On Sundays, pull out the slow cooker or make a low and slow soup with seasonal ingredients. Make a few extra servings to freeze for busy weeknights, out of town company or send with kids heading away to school.

Take your car for a check-up. Many of us will be hitting the roads this season, and whether it's a short carpool to school or a long trip to grandma's for a family feast, conditions can change quickly. It's important to ensure everything in your car is running smoothly. While you're at it, review your insurance policy to make sure you're covered for the unexpected. It's important to get a policy that's right for your coverage needs – and wallet. Connect with an experienced broker for some serious peace of mind.

Set priorities. You may not be able to do it all, and that's okay. On a regular basis, sit down with the family to determine the most important commitments and politely decline the things that may get in the way of enjoying the events you're anticipating the most. This will allow you to dedicate time and attention where you want so you can fully enjoy and connect with loved ones. ➔

Trois grandes tendances déco pour l'automne 2019

(EN) C'est actuellement le temps de se procurer manuels scolaires et sacs à dos, mais c'est aussi le moment de rafraîchir son décor. Voici un aperçu des tendances qui marqueront l'automne et la façon de les recréer chez soi pour enjoliver son intérieur.

Des espaces riches et somptueux. Après des années passées à prôner les espaces épurés et froids du style minimalisme, voici que le caractère audacieux et spectaculaire du maximalisme nous fait vibrer. Ce style est caractérisé par des espaces plus chaleureux et plus riches puisque les occupants y disposent leurs objets préférés qu'ils mélangent et agencent de manière esthétique. Sur les murs et pour le mobilier, ils choisissent des tons qui rappellent les pierres précieuses ainsi que des tissus et des matériaux naturels et confortables.

Des éléments audacieux et artistiques. Adieu sobriété et place à la richesse des superbes pièces qui ont une histoire unique et qui révèlent la personnalité des propriétaires. Optez donc pour des éléments de fabrication artisanale, qui ont du style et qui sont susceptibles de créer un effet visuel intéressant et qui sont, en tout cas, tout sauf ternes et ennuyeux. Pour attirer les regards sur votre décor, laissez libre cours à votre créativité en choisissant du mobilier et des articles de décoration qui vous inspirent ou que vous avez toujours voulu posséder, comme un bain sur pattes ancien, un luxueux lit à baldaquin ou une superbe table rustique fabriquée en bois récupéré.

Une consommation responsable. Chaque fois que vous achetez un article, réfléchissez à l'endroit d'où il vient et à la façon dont il a été fabriqué. De nos jours, tout est question d'achat éthique et responsable de produits durables et bien faits. Vous voulez vous procurer un édredon, des couvertures et des oreillers? Sachez qu'il n'a jamais été aussi facile de trouver du duvet d'origine locale, fabriqué de façon éthique et sans cruauté pour les animaux. Recherchez les produits portant l'étiquette Downmark, une entreprise canadienne sans but lucratif qui certifie que les produits respectent des normes de qualité strictes et des pratiques de récolte éthique. ➔

Finding ways to be thankful for the whole family

(NC) Looking to make some new family memories this Thanksgiving? With a holiday that celebrates the traditional harvest and blessings of the past year, get your crew into the spirit of giving back with some activities together.

Consider contacting your local soup kitchen and offer to have your family cook and serve a meal. If possible, decide on the menu together and ensure everyone has an active role in the process, whether that's chopping vegetables, assembling dessert or joining the clean-up crew.

You can also spend 15 minutes outside picking up litter together at your local park. This is a great chance to be active together and do something good for your neighbourhood.

Another idea is to divvy up the rooms in your house and gather all unused household items, clothes and accessories to give to others who likely need them more than you do. Even young children can get involved by being encouraged to donate their indoor and outdoor toys. Not only are you bound to feel good for donating to the less fortunate, you'll be reducing landfill waste. Learn more at declutter.diabetes.ca. ➔

A decade has passed since these once fresh-faced West Kings District High School grads last met as a large group.

West Kings class of ‘09 celebrates 10-year mark

It was a weekend of celebration for West Kings District High School's graduating class of 2009. Somehow, 10 years have passed since the grads left West Kings and, somehow (Facebook), we've managed to keep in touch.

This summer, an online post prompted class members to get moving and plan a reunion to celebrate the friendships and memories we once shared. High school reunions are organized by class members, not the school, and it was something many of the classmates were keen to see happen. It's no surprise to see many of these friendships remain strong, even though several of our class members have moved away.

The first event was a September 13 reception at West Kings, an opportunity for grads to revisit the school and see some of the staff members who are still there. For those grads who have children, it was an opportunity to show their little ones their former school and the all-too familiar (and somewhat embarrassing!) plaque where our grad photos are displayed.

The main event September 14 was held at the Oaken Barrel Pub in Greenwood, where close to 40 members of the graduating class and some partners came together. It was a casual night of food, drinks and eventual dancing, with door prizes from West Kings' campus store.

As with any reunion, this gathering wouldn't have been possible without help. Many members of the grad class pitched in to make the reunion happen, including John Berthiaume, Jessica Blinn, Sarah Henley and Russell Pollard. Thank you, too, to West Kings' principal Ms. Baker for supporting the grads as they pulled things together; and Mrs. Little, lead teacher of the O2 program, and her students for preparing a wonderful spread of food for the reception. If you ever need a community event catered, they are a great team to connect with! And, thank you to the owners and staff of the Oaken Barrel Pub for accommodating us. ➔

Bolingbroke/ Blenheim restoration marking milestones

Malcolm Uhlman,
Greenwood Military
Aviation Museum Society

After 10 years, a major milestone has been reached on the Greenwood Military Aviation Museum (GMAM) Bolingbroke/ Blenheim restoration project, with the final assembly of some of the major aircraft structures. Now complete are the successful attachment of the restored fuselage to the restored wing box, raising the fuselage/ wing box to allow the extension of the 70-year-old landing gear and setting the aircraft on its three wheels for the first time in 70 years, mating of the restored nose/ cockpit section to the fuselage, giving the first look at what the Boly will eventually look like on completion; and, finally, the major hurdle of attaching both 20-foot restored wing sections. Completion of the final painting can now be accomplished, after some final adjustments and minor additions.

The next few years will focus on manufacturing one engine mount, if one can't be obtained, as well as both engine nacelles and fairings; and restoring and attaching both engines and propellers.

The GMAM Bolingbroke restoration project began in earnest November 12, 2009. Being one of the last Bolingbroke airframes left in Canada, each section to be restored was a challenge because, in most cases, re-manufacturing was required of many components. To date, 17,000 man-hours have gone into the project by GMAM volunteers.

The Bolingbroke was Canadian-built and licensed from Bristol Aeroplane Company of England, where it was known as the Blenheim. More than 600 Bolingbrokes of various marks were built in Canada at Longueil, Quebec, and used in the early days of the Second World War as fighters/ light bombers and, later, as trainers. Canadian specifications required de-icing boots on the wing leading edges for harsh Canadian winters, larger fuel tanks for greater range, a dinghy for water survival and American/ Canadian instruments. A three-foot extension to the nose of the Mark I was designed to house a bombardier. This modification required two large, slanting windows for the bomb aimer and a scooped out section in front of the pilot to aid his vision during take-off and landing, giving the Bolingbroke its distinctive nose section.

The Greenwood museum's aircraft is a Mark IV-T (Training) version, registered as number 9997. Bolingbroke 9997 was donated to the GMAM by the Reynolds Heritage Preservation Foundation of Wetaskiwin, Alberta. The original wings from 9997 were corroded beyond repair; another set of wings from a different aircraft was donated by Bomber Command Museum, Nanton, Alberta. Lying in a farm field near Dauphin, Manitoba, on the edge of a swamp, where it had lain for about 60 years, the aircraft proved to be difficult to extricate. Finally brought to Greenwood in the fall of 2009, Boly 9997 began its long restoration Continuing the GMAM mandate to honour Station Greenwood's airmen and squadrons, Boly 9997 will be painted in Second World War camouflage colours representing 404 Squadron flying with Coastal Command out of Scotland in the early years of the conflict. At that time, the squadron was flying British-built aircraft: our restoration will be known as Blenheim EE-H.

At RAF/ RCAF Station Greenwood, Bolingbrokes

provided training for pilots, gunners, navigators and bombardiers as part of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan and, later, were used as target tugs pulling drogues for Mosquito and Hurricane pilot and gunnery training. Greenwood Bolingbroke aircraft recorded at RAF/ RCAF Station Greenwood included #10210, #9183, #9184 and #9096 (which crashed into the Bay of Fundy at Port George April 4, 1945). ➔
